Early Literacy

Diversity

October is Dyslexia Awareness Month. One strategy to help children struggling with early signs of dyslexia is to use a ruler to help them read in a straight line. This can help them stay focused.

Visit education.ohio.gov for more resources.

Book Exploration

Let children hold books and turn the pages.

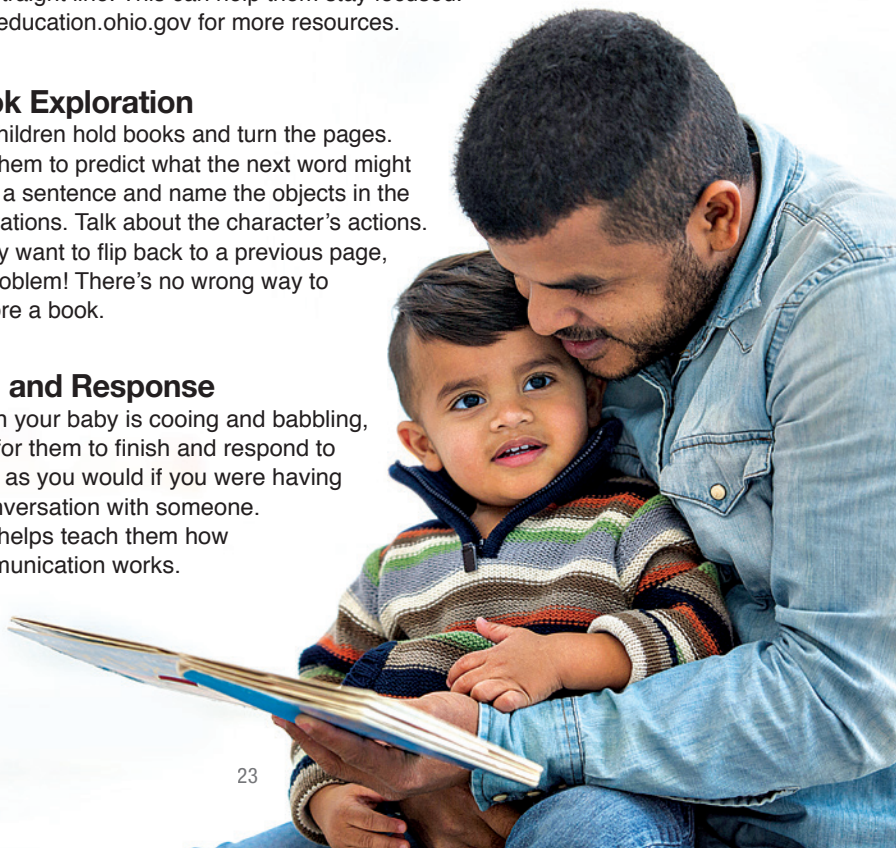

Ask them to predict what the next word might be in a sentence and name the objects in the illustrations. Talk about the character's actions.

If they want to flip back to a previous page, no problem! There's no wrong way to explore a book.

Call and Response

When your baby is cooing and babbling, wait for them to finish and respond to them as you would if you were having a conversation with someone.

This helps teach them how communication works.
